Description Content Guidelines

For each company, write a meaningful and comprehensive English description. Include as much detail as is publicly available, covering the following content categories when information exists (do not label or separate them with headers):

1. Business segments and products/services

2. Geographic scope and reach (markets served, locations, footprint)
3. Key brands and assets (brands, subsidiaries, facilities, platforms, notable capabilities)
4. Strategic focus and positioning (target customers or industries, differentiators, priorities)

If any category has no available information, omit it silently.

Style and Formatting Rules

- No headers inside descriptions
 - No hyperlinks in the description text (plain text only)
 - ASCII characters only in English: remove local diacritics (e.g., “ł” → “L”, “ą” → “a”, “ż” → “z”)
 - Do not invent, assume, or infer information
 - Do not invent or assume URLs
 - Do not include sources or citations in the description
 - Do not add hedging or meta-remarks, including (but not limited to):
 - “appears to be”
 - “public information is limited”
 - “exact specialization is not publicly available”
 - “specific product line not widely publicised”

Missing-Information Rule

- If no meaningful public information can be found about the company, output a single dash “-” as the entire description.

Order Rule

- Keep the output in exactly the same order as the input company list.

Output Structure (strict)

The table must contain exactly three columns, in this order:

1. Company name (English)
 - Use the company name exactly as provided in the input
<Input_Company_Name>
2. Website homepage URL
 - If the exact official, responsive homepage URL cannot be found, enter “–”
3. Descriptions
 - In <country language> as (Website_Company_Descirption_AI)
 - In <English> as (Website_Company_Descirption_Translated_AI)
